What is an uninterruptible power supply (UPS)?

An uninterruptible power supply (UPS) is a device that ensures that the load stays powered even if the grid blacks out. On a very simplified diagram, you can see how the direct current standby UPS works. When there is power on a grid, current flows first via an ACDC converter and then via a DCDC converter to the output.

Why are uninterruptible power supplies important?

In times of increasing relevance of decentral power supplies and decreasing reliability of the power supply networks, uninterruptible power supplies (UPS) become more and more important.

What do you need to make an uninterruptible power supply?

For prototypes, you need a soldering iron, cuprextit boards, wires, solder, flux, and the components listed later. For measurement, you need a multimeter, an oscilloscope, and a thermometer (or thermal camera). Step 1: What Is an Uninterruptible Power Supply?

Do I need a power distribution unit?

Be sure to consider how the input power or utility power will be delivered to your most critical equipment. Some electrical equipment may be plugged directly into the UPS. In others, you may require a PDU (Power Distribution Unit) to help distribute the power to computer systems and other electrical apparatus.
